FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE:

TREICHEL AWARDED ALUMNUS AWARD FROM EIU

CHARLESTON, IL--Janet Treichel, a 1971 Eastern Illinois University graduate, has received the "Distinguished Alumnus Award" from Eastern's Lumpkin College of Business during a recent recognition ceremony.

Treichel, a Charleston native now living in Herndon, Va., is the college's 24th alumnus to receive the highest honor given to an individual who has made significant contributions to business, industry, education or a profession.

She has been executive director of the National Business Education Association since 1989 and is responsible for managing all national headquarter operations.

DISTINGUISHED ALUMNUS

Currently, she is a member of the Dean's Business Advisory Board of the Lumpkin College of Business and has received several awards and honors. She has written numerous articles and research reports dealing with business issues and education.

Treichel earned her bachelor's and master's degrees in business education at Eastern and doctorate in vocational education from the University of Illinois.

She has held positions of responsibility such as technical director of the Navy Occupational Development Analysis Center for the U.S. Department of the Navy; adjunct professor at George Mason University; special consultant to the North Dakota Occupational Information Coordinating Committee; and special consultant to the U.S. Department of Defense's National Occupational Information Coordinating Committee.

Treichel is the daughter of Harriet Metcalf of Charleston and the late Don Metcalf, who was a chief engineer at Eastern's physical plant. She has two children, Laura Sutherland of Houston, Texas, and Scott Sutherland of Fishers, Indiana.
